On 31st December 1910 there were in the Madras Presidency the following Criminal Courts, viz.:— Courts.

On 1st June 1910 a new Sessions Court and a new District Magistrate's Court were established for the Ramnad district, which was constituted from that date, and at the same time the Madura Additional Sessions Court and Additional District Magistrate's Court were abolished. The Additional Sessions Court at Coimbatore was abolished from 10th December 1910, its place being taken by an Assistant Sessions Judge's Court early in the present year. As the result of the re-arrangement of divisions and taluks in several districts the number of Sub-divisional Magistrates was increased by 8 and that of Subordinate Magistrates by 31 (including 10 Tahsildars) in the course of the year. Besides Magistrates of the grades already mentioned 3,990 Village Magistrates actually tried cases in the year, i.e., 231 less than the average of the five preceding years. Order—No. 1645, Judicial, dated 26th October 1911.

Criminal Justice was administered during the year 1910 by the following classes of courts :—

|---|---|
| (1) High Court (Chief Justice and seven Puisne Judges). | |
| (2) Sessions Courts (including Additional) .. .. .. .. | 28 |
| (3) Stipendiary magistrates .. .. .. .. .. .. | 663 |
| (4) Special magistrates (including Cantonment) .. .. .. | 69 |
| (5) Honorary magistrates, 62 benches including 372 magistrates. | |
| (6) Village magistrates .. .. .. .. .. .. .. | 3,990 |

The entry against village magistrates represents those who exercised jurisdiction during the year: it was less by 312 than in 1909. The regular courts were strengthened by the addition of 88 magistrates, chiefly stipendiary subordinate magistrates. Of the 737 regular judges and magistrates, 104 were Europeans and the rest Eurasians or Indians.

2. The total number of original cases instituted in the criminal courts showed a considerable decrease on the number of the previous year and a very large decrease on the average of the five preceding years. This falling off affected almost all the classes of courts and the number of cases brought before village magistrates (10,660) was smaller than in any year since 1906, the Ceded districts, as usual, contributing the smallest number of cases.

3. The disposal of work by the regular courts during the year cannot be regarded as entirely satisfactory, since in spite of an increase of 88 in the number of courts and a decrease of 5,372 in the total number of cases for disposal, 3,995 cases were left pending at the end of the year against 3,481 in 1909, i.e, an increased pendency of 514. On the other hand the average duration of cases in the mufassal magistrates' courts fell from 7 to 6 days.

4. The total number of cases disposed of during the year by all classes of courts was 287,226. Of this total the courts of stipendiary magistrates contributed no less than 150,574. These courts were 659 (excluding Presidency Magistrates) in number. Benches of magistrates contributed over 64,000 to the total disposal, but this does not imply that the stipendiary magistrates are relieved of work to that extent, for the benches are generally presided over by one of the regular subordinate magistrates. This is not necessary, and it is hoped that in future pensioned magistrates will more often be appointed to preside over these benches.

The work coming before the Presidency Magistrates was slightly heavier than in the previous year, but considerably less than it was five years ago. Since the close of the year under review the Government have appointed two benches of honorary magistrates for the City of Madras to relieve the stipendiary magistrates of a mass of petty cases which have hitherto occupied a large part of their time.

5. The average duration of cases was naturally least in the courts of special and honorary bench magistrates. These courts do not deal with complicated cases, and it should generally be possible for them to dispose of a case in a single sitting. The average duration was two days, and in the courts of second and third class stipendiary magistrates seven days—an additional indication of the desirability of transferring to a much larger extent the mass of petty theft, assault and hurt cases which now encumber the files of the sub-magistracy, to be dealt with by honorary magistrates. It would be an advantage to all concerned to have such cases brought before a court which is at leisure to dispose of them immediately. The advantage would be especially appreciated by witnesses, of whom only three were detained beyond three days in the courts of bench and special magistrates, whereas as many as 2,603 were detained for more than three days in cases tried by stipendiary sub-magistrates. This is, however, a great improvement on the figures of last year, and the improvement is general in all courts except courts of session, where the proportion of witnesses so detained was again over 20 per cent. The average duration of trials before sessions courts, however, shows an improvement, being 36 days from committal to conclusion of trial against 40 in the previous year.

6. Offences.—The total number of offences reported during the year was 335,390, or 4,074 less than in 1909. The decrease, however, is confined to offences under the Indian Penal Code which fell by 7,392. Offences under special and local laws numbered 3,318 more than in the previous year. Prosecutions under special and local laws are numerous in this Presidency, the number of offences being 211,378 as against 124,012 offences under the Penal Code. This is not altogether a satisfactory feature, for the Government do not desire that these special and local laws should be popularly regarded as penal instruments rather than as regulations providing for the safety, health and convenience of the public or of important sections of the community. The proportion, however, of prosecutions for offences of this class to prosecutions for what may more properly be described as "crimes" appears to have been on the decrease during the last five years; and this tendency in the right direction will no doubt continue with a more judicious application of these enactments. The number of offences was largest under the Town Nuisances Act (81,727), the Madras City Police Act (42,961), the District Municipalities and City Municipal Acts (20,588 and 11,726) and the Forest Act (15,510).

7. Of the 335,390 offences of all kinds reported during the year, the complaints relating to 13,778 (or a little over 4 per cent.) were rejected under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code; 1,601 were struck off as false; and 281,394 were actually brought to trial. The percentage of convictions (persons) for offences under the Penal Code was 52·8. The offences which chiefly contributed to the low percentage of convictions were hurt, wrongful restraint, assault, mischief, criminal trespass and insult. And yet of complaints of offences of this nature only an inconsiderable proportion (in no case exceeding about 12 per cent.) were rejected under section 203, Criminal Procedure Code. The bulk of the remaining complaints were prosecuted to an unsuccessful termination and the time of the court and of parties and witnesses was thus wasted. Nor was the failure to discriminate between genuine and artificial complaints at all adequately redeemed by a liberal use of the provisions of section 250 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, when once the evidence had exposed the frivolous nature of so many complaints. District Magistrates are again urged to impress upon their subordinate magistrates the advantages of a more extensive use of the provisions of sections 203 and 250, Criminal Procedure Code.

8. Punishments.—Of the 242,888 persons convicted during the year of various offences, 25,657 were sentenced to imprisonment (sentences of rigorous imprisonment being to those of simple imprisonment in about the ratio of 3 to 1), 215,073 (or a little over 90 per cent. of the total) to fine, and 620 to whipping. The percentage of whippings to the total number of all punishments was 15·40, while in 1909 it was 19·92, in 1908 it was 21·46, and in 1907 it was 28·09. In 199,118 of the 215,073 fines imposed the amount was Rs. 10 or less. Out of a total of 25,657 sentences of imprisonment imposed during the year, no less than 9,412 (or about 30 per cent.) were for periods not exceeding fifteen days. Of these 4,220 were imposed by Village Magistrates. Sentences for very short periods are obviously not reformatory in character, and they can be intended only as punishments. It is probable, however, that a fine would be more keenly felt by most of the offenders upon whom such trivial sentences are inflicted, than a week in a sub-jail; while in many cases it would be sufficient to release the offender on probation of good conduct. The folly of short sentences of imprisonment in the case of the majority of first offenders has already been commented on by the Government in reviewing the report on the administration of Jails.

The present report does not distinguish between adults and juveniles among the persons who were punished by the courts during the year. But from the Jail Administration report it appears that 619 juveniles were admitted to jail during the year, while the report now under review shows that the alternative modes of dealing with juvenile offenders, viz., by release on probation under section 562, Criminal Procedure Code, by whipping, and, by detention in the Reformatory, were applied in 153, 620 and 23 cases, respectively, making a total of 796 (of whom not all were juveniles) against 619 youthful offenders sent to jail.

9. Juries and assessors.—The High Court have not remarked upon the working of the jury system during the year, but the figures compare not unsatisfactorily with those of previous years. The number of cases tried by jury was 1,184, and the verdict of the jury was approved by the judge in all but 48 cases. Coimbatore, Bellary, Kurnool and Salem provided the largest number of disagreements between judge and jury, while in Tinnevelly, the judge approved of all but a single verdict. There was less unanimity between judge and assessors, and here also the disagreements were very frequent in the districts above mentioned and also in the Vizagapatam Agency and in Tinnevelly.

10. Appeals—Revisions.—The total number of appeals and revision applications was less than in 1909, the diminution being concurrent with a general decrease in original trials.
